United Way of Rhode Island

1977 – 2004

Leader of a community building operation focused on systems change and on achieving results. Built a team that leveraged funds with individual and corporate donors, local and national foundations and government to achieve maximum impact in affordable housing, community development, family support, workforce development and out of school time activities.

Developed a multi-million-dollar workforce development effort focused on economic independence for displaced populations, an innovative partnership with the RI Human Resource Investment Council. This resulted from a comprehensive analysis of Rhode Island's human care system, Needs for the Nineties, undertaken by a coalition led by United Way in partnership with Ira Magaziner.

Part of the leadership team of a broadly representative coalition that designed and successfully lobbied for Rhode Island's welfare reform legislation. This is recognized as one of the most progressive reform laws in the country.

Part of a management team that led, designed and implemented United Way's new community impact strategic agenda which is based on priority goals, a variety of community interventions and broad engagement of Rhode Islanders.

Part of a leadership group that convinced the National Local Initiatives Support Corporation (LISC) to establish a Rhode Island Office in 1991. To date RI LISC has invested more than $529 million in Rhode Island. It has helped build or rehabilitate more than 10,140 affordable homes and apartments, and created or improved over 5,500 childcare slots. Helped establish LISC's Neighborhood Development Fund.

Played a leadership role in establishing the Station Nightclub Fire Relief Fund to respond to the needs of victims and their families. Managed a coalition that responded to the emergency needs of the homeless during the winters of 2002/2003 and 2003/2004.
